Washington, June 11 (A.P.).—With the Nation's memorials to her greatest heroes looking down upon him, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today was welcomed home and ceremoniously inducted into the ranks of American immortals. Many thousands of his fellow citizens cheered him and tried to touch his hand as he paraded down Pennsylvania avenue and many thousands more gathered in a howling mass at the base of the Washington monument where President Coolidge bestowed upon him, in the name of the Republic, the first of a new order of decorations for valor.

LINDY AT CAPITAL

This photo of Col. C. A. Lindbergh was made by International Newsreel immediately after he landed in Washington today to receive the greatest ovation ever accorded an individual. The picture then was transmitted to the Boston Evening American over the telephone wires of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. It was the first photo made of 'Lindy'.

Pennsylvania avenue and many thousands more gathered in a howling mass at the base of the Washington monument where President Coolidge bestowed upon him, in the name of the Republic, the first of a new order of decorations for valor.

It is the Distinguished Flying Cross, conferred on Lindbergh in recognition of his thunderbolt flight across the Atlantic three weeks ago today.

Rides With Proud Mother

Riding beside his mother, who had been the first to meet him when he reached Washington at noon on the cruiser Memphis, Lindbergh scarcely seemed to hear the plaudits of the crowds that packed the way of his triumphal journey down Washington's most famous thoroughfare.

He acknowledged the rolling cheers now and again with a nod of the uncovered head, but most of the way he sat unresponsive.

As he rode past the Postoffice Department, where an airplane propeller had been hung above the entrance in recognition of his service as an air mail pilot, he barely turned his head and waved an acknowledgment.

Mrs. Coolidge All Smiles

Even before the dauntless young airman neared the monument grounds, the crowd there expanded almost incredibly.

It surrounded solidly the small reception stand for almost as far as the eye could see. Many more thousands were on top of the distant knolls.

President Coolidge already was at his place on the reception line.

LINDBERGH IN SPEECH SAYS FRANCE LOVES U.S.

Washington, June 11 (A.P.).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, on being presented with the Distinguished Flying Cross by President Coolidge today, said:

"On the evening of the 21st of May, last, I arrived at LeBourget, Paris. During the week I spent in France, the day in Belgium, and the short period in London and England, the people of France and the people of Europe requested that I bring back to the people of America one message from the people of France and the people of Europe.

"At every gathering, at every meeting I attended, were the same words: 'You have seen the affection of the people of France and the people of Europe for the people of America demonstrated to you.'"

"Here the speech was broken by a thundering moment of applause. Then Lindbergh continued his quotation of the message he said had been sent back to America from Europe, saying:

"Demonstrated to you. Upon your return to your country take back with you this message from France and Europe to the United States of America."

"I thank you."

5 DEAD IN HEAT WAVE; SCORES PROSTRATED

A toll of five lives has already been taken, another man is dying and scores of prostrations are reported from all parts of New England as a result of the heat wave which has held New England in its grip for the past seven-and-a-half hours.

Property damage running into the thousands resulted from the severe electrical storm which swept over New England, but which failed to break the backbone of the intense heat.

Today the mercury is climbing steadily again, with temperatures a few degrees less than yesterday, when the mercury reached 91, but cooler weather is forecast for tonight and Sunday.

Coolidge Lauds Lindy as 'Ideal American Youth'

Washington, June 11.—President Coolidge, in bestowing the Distinguished Flying Cross upon Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, said:

"My fellow countrymen:

"It was in America that the modern art of flying on heavier-than-air machines was first developed. As the experiments became successful, the airplane was devoted to practical purposes. It has been adapted to commerce in the transportation of passengers and mail and used for national defense by our land and sea forces, beginning with a limited flying

Occasionally he smiled at the crowd and turned to talk to those about him.

Mrs. Coolidge bowed and smiled to friends in the stands. Members of the Cabinet with their wives took seats on the President's platform.

Stirring cries and cheers announced to the waiting throng at the stands that Lindbergh was approaching.

It was just 1 o'clock when the car bearing the viking of the air turned into the monument grounds.

The band struck up John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and another band began to play "The Star-Spangled Banner."

With the soldiers and police keeping the crowds out of the inclosure about him, Lindbergh quickly mounted the platform.

He bowed and shook hands with the President while Mrs. Coolidge drew Mrs. Lindbergh to a seat beside her. Lindbergh was escorted to the place reserved for him while the great crowd came to its feet with a welcome that lasted two minutes.

COOLIDGE SITS DOWN

Mr. Coolidge tried to begin his speech but had to sit down until the thousands had given their homage to the young flier.

Then Mr. Coolidge tried it again with more success. His speech was interrupted with applause every time he alluded to the aviator.

As the Chief Executive joined the crowd, the first to be struck off on the hotel of the blue coat of the world's hero, a mighty roar went up from the thousands upon thousands who were massed in the broad expanse of park surrounding the granite shaft erected to the memory of the first President.

Joseph McLaughlin, aged 31, of No. 3 Marcella street, Roxbury, at Reel hospital.

Miss Margaret Carney, 20, of No. 20 Norwiche street, South End. At City hospital.

Heavy damage from the electrical storm was reported from all parts of New England.

The main building of the Wakefield Rifle Range and an adjoining building, both owned by the State, were burned after lightning struck the main building. The loss was $25,000. Sixty sailors and marines, quartered on the range, were unable to make headway in combating the flames.

CHURCHES ARE BURNED.

The steeple of the Second Baptist Church at Newport, R. I., was struck by lightning. Fire destroyed the tower, but the firemen were able to save the main structure of the edifice.

The Free Baptist Church at Waterford was struck by lightning and the edifice was burned with a loss of $75,000. The church, one of the landmarks of the town, was erected in 1847.

The transformer house at the Parker Hill Mills in Fitchburg was struck by lightning. Three firemen were knocked unconscious when their hose line came in contact with a high-power wire while fighting the fire.

Assembled the wind storm which accompanied the lightning and rain, one two distinct paths through the town. Trees were uprooted, but no buildings were in the path of the storm.

BOLT STRIKES MAN.

The home of John J. Snow, Jr., on the Ayer-Groton State road was burned after it had been struck by lightning. The Groton firemen responded to the alarm, but the structure was doomed when the firemen reached the scene.

A bolt of lightning struck the automobile of M. Lee McMenon of Fitchburg. The bolt glanced from the machine and struck McMenon, partly paralyzing him. He drove to the hospital where he collapsed. He will recover.

COOL WAY COMING.

At Beverly Beach the public bathing houses were opened officially for the season today. There was a wild rush for the surf by the throngs that fied to escape the city's heat and before noon at least 10,000 persons were in the water, or frolicking on the beach in bathing suits.

This cool wave is expected to reach Boston tonight.

BARBER HELD AS GIRL SLAYER

Rutland, Vt., June 11.—An itinerant barber, with five cents in cash and a barber's outfit in his possession, is being held here by Sheriff Henry R. Adams as a suspect in the murder of Stella Kate at Salisbury Beach.

The man, intoxicated, endeavored to secure employment at several shops before Sheriff Adams was notified. The sheriff declared today that the man answered in a general way the description of George Taylor, the tramp barber for whom a warrant had been sworn out for the murder.

When questioned the tramp barber gave evasive answers and gave several different cities as his place of address. He has been held on the charge of drunkenness, pending the arrival of Massachusetts police and Salisbury police who will look him over.

Meanwhile the posse of police who started from Salisbury bound for the Canadian border in the search for the barber suspect, are combing all the towns as they beat their way toward the border.

At Whitefield a party of Boston newspapermen picked up the trail which was several days old, while the State an Salisbury police were searching in Berlin 1 mile east.

The trial of the accused man is now concentrated up to Thursday night at 8 o'clock, the hour when he was arrested on Tuesday.

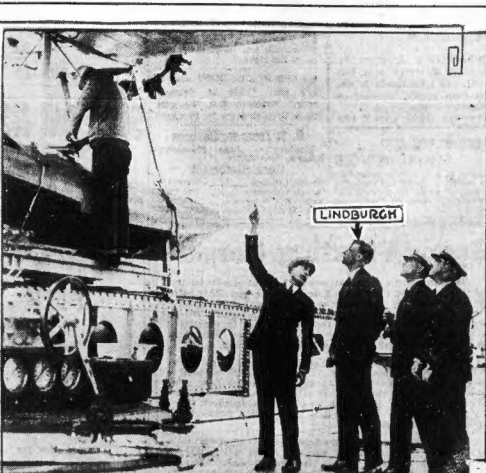

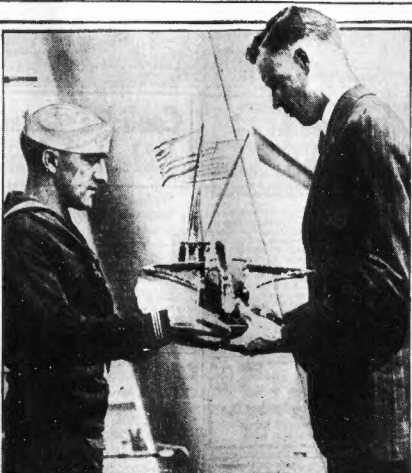

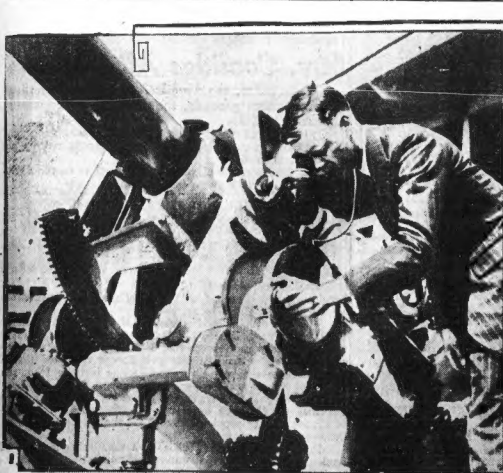

The trail has been built up painstakingly bit by bit from last Sunday night, when the murder was committed, until that time.

Lumber camps are to be searched. The fugitive will get a warm reception from the armed officers should he be discovered and show fight, for the authorities will take no chances on his escape once he comes within their reach.

CLINE JEALOUS, IRWIN DEATH QUIZ SHOWS

Danvers, Ct., June 11 (A.P.)—That Leonard Cline, novelist, beheaded Wilfred P. Irwin, his friend and guest, who was shot fatally at Cline's home in Mansfield on May 18, had had "a flirtation" with his wife, Mrs. Katharine G. Cline, is revealed in the detailed report of the inquest of Coroner Arthur G. Hill. Cline is awaiting trial for the alleged murder of Irwin.

MRS. CONRAD
Wife of B. B. Conrad was sponsor for the new yacht.

L' LAYS OFF 170 FOR SUMMER

Asked if she had ever seen any indications that Cline was jealous of Irwin, Mrs. Irwin replied: "No, I didn't see any, but I know that Mr. Cline had some hallucinations about other men. When he'd drink he'd imagine. He said Bill (Irwin) and she (Mrs. Cline) had a flirtation. I didn't say anything to Wilfred, but when I saw him Sunday Wilfred said he (Cline) never said anything to him about it."

A summer lay-off, affecting 170 motormen and conductors in all divisions of the Boston Elevated Railway, commenced today. The employees' vacations will last until Labor Day in most cases. The Brooklyn division was hit most seriously, with a total of sixty men dropped from the payroll for the summer.

SOVIET LEADER SAYS ENGLAND 'STIRS WAR'

Moscow, June 11 (A.P.)—The reply of the Soviet government to the Polish note expressing regret for the assassination of Pierre Volokoff, Soviet minister at Warsaw, will be handed to M. Palok, the Polish minister here, tonight.

Moscow, June 11 (A.P.)—Soviet Russia's War Minister, Gen. V. V. Volokoff, told a meeting of workers today that England had set stirred up feeling against Russia that a date was named.

Turning the international situation "acute" and asserting that "no slackening of the hostilities against us can be expected," he added: "There are many who believed we can avert a conflict, but I declare we are nearing the point where class war is inevitable."

IRISH ELECTION LEAVES DAIL UNCHANGED

Dublin, Ireland, June 11 (A.P.)—Basing their conclusions on the preliminary figures thus far available from Thursday's balloting, government quarters today expressed belief there would be no marked change in the political lineup of the new Dail Eireann.

De Valera probably has been re-elected. Government candidates, it was said, seemed to be holding their own or to have suffered but slight decrease in votes. The attack by the opposition against the seats held by the ministers seemed to have failed. It was added, and it was known that William T. Cosgrave, president of the executive council, Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Justice, and Ernest Blythe, Minister of Finance, had been elected.

De Valera's Republican candidates were doing well, but thus far not consistently better than in the 1923 elections. Notwithstanding the large number of women who voted, the women candidates received comparatively few votes.

The highest poll reached by any candidate thus far was given to Alfred Byrne, Independent, in Dublin. Byrne stood apart from all political affiliations and held no campaign meetings.

HIGH COURT GETS SEIZED AUTO CASE

The full bench of the Supreme Court will be called upon to decide, at its October sitting, whether an automobile sold on the installment plan and not fully paid for can be declared forfeited to the Commonwealth because of the transportation of liquor.

The case may eventually go to the United States Supreme Court. The automobile in question was bought by Joseph Moran, but registered in the name of Nathaniel Stearns. The Industrial Finance Commission, the title owner of the car, learned of the registration and notified Moran that the contract was cancelled, but in the meantime the police seized the car, operated by Stearns.

Both the Roxbury District Court and the superior Court declared the automobile forfeited to the government, but Judge Frothingham, believing that the questions should be passed upon by the Supreme Court, reported the case up to that body for a decision.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER INDICTED IN KILLING

St. Johnsbury, Vt., June 11 (A.P.)—Mrs. Harriette Bell, 45, and her daughter, Mrs. Marion Jackson, 19, of Winooski, Vt., were indicted by a grand jury for murder in the first degree in the death of Bella's newborn baby girl, whose body was found in the Passumpsic river here on May 16. Mrs. Jackson confessed to smothering the baby with a towel at the direction of her mother, taking the body, wrapped in towels, newspapers and a paper bag, to a railroad bridge and dropping it into the river.

GOES MAN THE SIDES AS LINDY EMBARKS

Every vantage point on the cruiser was occupied by the officers and crew as Colonel Lindbergh mounted the side from a launch at Cherbourg. Huge crowds turned out in that French town to cheer a farewell as he departed.

100 PLANES ESCORT LINDY'S SHIP TO NATIONAL CAPITAL

Then the two shook hands and Lindbergh advanced to the microphone to reply. The crowd shouted him with a roaring demonstration. When he had quieted them, leaning forward, and with both hands holding the stand, he made his speech of thanks slow and distinctly.

After Lindbergh's speech the crowd cheered and cheered and President Coolidge shook hands with him. Then the band struck up an air and the President and Mrs. Coolidge took Lindbergh and his mother away in White House cars to the White House guests until they leave Washington.

As Lindbergh followed the President from the stands, many of the soldiers pushed forward but the police kept them back. Lindbergh's car moved slowly. He tried to reach some of the hundreds of hands that were stretched forward to him as he moved by. He laughed and waved and cried "Hello" to those who were too far away to touch him.

Contrary to the expectations of the reception committee, Lindbergh was wearing civilian clothes. His uniform as a colonel in the Missouri National Guard had been put aboard the Memphis in case he should want to wear it when he received his military decorations, but he thought differently.

He wore a blue serge suit, a black tie and white shirt, and the gray felt hat already made famous by the pictures taken of him in Europe.

While thousands rushed from the monument grounds in an effort to get a glimpse of Lindbergh, the great majority remained for a daylight aerial fireworks display in honor of his hero.

As a conqueror that Lindbergh, with his mother, rode triumphantly to the national shrine, where he received the tributes of the fellow-countrymen from their chief executive.

For a moment before he left, once more on the deck of the cruiser Memphis with his mother, he was crowded before the decks of the school mistress and the son who stood before kings, receiving honors in the execution of their own hands.

Strong at the navy yard had their first glimpse of the hero as he acknowledged their cheers from the bridge of the Memphis. Later, the top of the car had been thrown back and the crowds along the way had a close view of their hero.

Already the sidewalks of Pennsylvania Avenue were densely crowded and at an enormous ground two miles away where a small stand had been set for ceremonies of presentation of the flying decorations, a throng of fifty thousand had gathered.

A few minutes later, when the 100-gun government engines were let out, the crowds both silent and

Boston Flags Out Early in Honor of Lindy

FROM flagstaffs throughout the city the colors fluttered to the breeze today in honor of Colonel Lindbergh's return to his native land.

City Hall, the State House, office buildings, business houses and homes responded enthusiastically to the request of Mayor Nichols at the behest of the Boston Evening American that flags be flown.

Mayor Nichols asked that Boston show its welcome to "Lindy" by flying the flag at noon, but most of the business houses and municipal buildings did not wait for noon to loose the hunting.

Hundreds of Bostonians, eager to greet personally Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, these aviator hero, will leave South Station tonight for Washington over the New Haven lines to participate in the final ceremonies given in his honor. They will arrive tomorrow morning and return home at night.

New York's first roar of welcome will be heard when the airplane lands in an amphitheater in the harbor at 10 a. m. There he will be taken aboard the municipal ship Niagara and landed at the Battery.

An elaborate schedule of dinners and receptions will follow and he leaves for St. Louis Friday morning in the plane "Spirit of St. Louis." Mayor Walker has proclaimed Monday a day of "public celebration." One million school children will be freed from books for the day to join in the reception.

The New York Stock Exchange, the Club Market, and the coffee, sugar and cocoa exchanges will be closed for the day.

'Lindy' Sidelights

Alexandria, Va., June 11 (A.P.).—Twenty-one guns, the salute reserved only for Presidents and visiting sovereigns, boomed out here today in tribute to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, as the cruiser Memphis passed this historic port.

Washington, June 11 (N.S.).—Ten messenger boys staggered into the White House executive offices at 10 a. m. today, bearing the nation's telegraph greetings to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh. There were 52,000 messages in the lead. One of them was 500 feet in length and bore 17,000 signatures. It came from Minneapolis.

Washington, June 11 (A.P.).—Charles A. Lindbergh went to the bridge of the cruiser Memphis as she steamed past here today to salute the national shrine at Mt. Vernon, home and tomb of George Washington.

Washington, June 11 (A.P.).—Police, secret service and a whole army of troops motored through the city today to put on an unannounced handshakes with Lindy.

Washington, June 11 (N.S.).—Southeast Washington, where the navy yard is located, makes no pretensions of being a fashionable society. The police bear witness to the fact there are some "tough customers" down Southeast, but the more elite Northwest could never fall for "Lindy" any more heartily than did the thousands of workers in the Southeast section who acclaimed the air hero today.

Washington, June 11 (N.S.).—It was noted that Lindbergh did not appear in his new colonel's uniform when honored here today. It was a spike and span new outfit, all but finished with the silver eagles, but apparently the youth would have none of it. He wore a double-breasted civilian suit of blue.

Washington, June 11.—Colonel Lindbergh and his mother met with no curious eyes to the navy yard dock, but it was conceded to be characteristic of both.

New York, June 11 (N.S.).—Colonel Charles Lindbergh today was offered a salary of $100,000 a year to manage the serial activities of the American Society for the Promotion of Aviation.

LINDY AWE ON POTOMAC VOYAGE

By WILLIAM HILLMAN, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 11.—"I would like to steal up the river in a little boat and watch all this," said the somewhat watertight and simple statement made to me by Colonel Charles Lindbergh as the cruiser Memphis steamed up the Potomac today, into the midst of one of the greatest ovations given any American.

"I'd like to be free for a few minutes to take it in," Lindbergh added. "I'm happy to get this welcome, but it would be greater fun watching it than getting it."

WON'T TALK TO GIRL

The conquering hero even had an eye for feminine clothing. "I don't like to talk to a girl," he said, looking at a group of inspectors on the U. S. S. Potomac. "I've been away so long—least I seem so."

"Why don't you wave at that pretty one in blue?" Admiral Burrage asked him. "Oh, she's probably busy, too," Lindbergh replied with a characteristic laugh.

Colonel Lindbergh was that a serious boy, spectacles with an air, as he saw thousands lined up on the shore. He looked at the Memphis steamed up the Potomac and as planes circled overhead the voyager across had gone, and he seemed a little afraid at what awaited him, somewhat at a loss to know what that tremendous sea was being made.

ADMIRAL DIRIGIBLE

Colonel Lindbergh stood on the bridge deck and scanned the skies and the shores and the waters, and everywhere he saw tribute being paid him.

The dirigible Los Angeles joined the escort and Lindbergh commented, "I don't like it." He waved his hand to aviators as they swooped down close to the ship.

McCandless, Burrage approached him and handed him notification that he had been made an honorary colonel in the naval reserves. "I can lend you a uniform," said the admiral, and Lindbergh merely waved his hand to the water.

The Memphis approached Quantico and hundreds of marines, there, and Lindbergh stood on the deck and waved his hand to the sailors. "I can lend you a uniform," said the admiral, and Lindbergh merely waved his hand to the water.

SALUTES MT. VERNON

When the cruiser passed the tomb of George Washington, the order was given. "This is the order," said the admiral, and Lindbergh stood at half attention, and the ship fired a salute over the cruiser, saluting the Potomac.

The smile that conquered Europe and that soon was to conquer America was on his face. For a second only there was a slight frown as he saw the first of the dirigible Los Angeles.

For the first few minutes after the air demonstration was over, Lindbergh was found in the ship's stern. Then he found himself and he became Lindbergh the aviator again.

"They're pretty good bombers," he said.

KING O' HOPPERS HOPPING

remarked the young flier critically, as he watched the plane "Spirit of Jacksonville" maneuvering over the cruiser.

The pilot of the plane had dropped a packet of letters signed by the governors of Florida, the mayors of Jacksonville and other Florida officials.

The planes succeeded in dropping the letters on the deck of the Memphis after four attempts. "That is fine to think they would sign all those letters," remarked Lindbergh as the package was handed to him.

Lindbergh returned to American letters to receive one of the greatest tributes in history. "This is fine," he said. "This is great." He signed the first navy plans.

He gave a quick and then came a smile that seemed close to tears, but that was all. The mood was about quiet and during the hour displayed great interest in the planes circling overhead and waved continual salutes or greetings to the sailors.

At 8:35 the dirigible Los Angeles appeared off the starboard bow, flying at a low altitude. Lindbergh was found in the ship's stern. Then he found himself and he became Lindbergh the aviator again.

"They're pretty good bombers," he said.

London, June 11 (N.S.).—Lord Swaythling, head of the banking firm of Samuel Montagu & Co. and one of the richest men in the world, died today at his home in Kensington. He was 81 years old.

He was revealed to her, he was sending her a letter and he was writing it. When the signal finally was given for Mrs. Lindbergh to board the ship, she walked briskly to the gang plank and saw about as she walked to the Admiral's cabin where Lindbergh was waiting.

While the crowds cheered and the band played, the great salute was fired. Lindbergh's mother saw him and she was able to recognize him in the crowd.

"Lind, Lindy," some one cried, "beet's your mother!" But it still was unable to get her eye of the crane.

Just as the gangplank was being made fast that Lindbergh's mother in the crowd.

Mathematical gathering received several bouquets of flowers from the crowd. Mrs. Lindbergh was seen in the crowd. She was unable to get her eye of the crane.

young man who assumed the world with his history-making air feat. Continuing sharply with the reception of Lindbergh at the dock and the ovation he received everywhere was the unobtrusive journey of Mrs. Lindbergh from the temporary White House on Dupont Circle to the side of the ship. She traveled in a White House automobile with John Hays Hammond, chairman of the city's reception committee, and a White House aide. Few recognized her as her automobile sped along the Capital streets, because all eyes were turned upon her famous son.

ON BALCONY

She stood on the balcony of a porch of the navy yard commandant's house as the Memphis approached the dock. The ship bearing her son came nearer and went to the gang plank so that she might go aboard to be with her mother.

From that point she recognized the outline of her son standing erect in the bright sunlight on the cruiser's bridge. She stood with a few friends as the ship came to anchor. As it moved past to the wharf she went to the landing and waited there for the coming of the gang plank so that she might go aboard to be with her mother.

CROWD CHEERS

Shortly after Mrs. Lindbergh boarded the cruiser the Memphis fired a salute and the crowd cheered.

Lindbergh missed the first chance of a glimpse of his mother. She was in the center of a crowd when some one cried, "There he is!" She ran and waved her handkerchief and smiled, trying to catch the eye of her son, but the flier failed to catch the signal.

"Lind, Lindy," some one cried, "beet's your mother!" But it still was unable to get her eye of the crane.

Freight Clerk With a Voice.

Three months ago, Steve Weniger, vocal soloist with Phil Spitalny at Loew's State, was an obscure billing clerk in a railroad freight office. Spitalny made the discovery that Weniger could sing as well as calculate freight tariffs and persuaded him to turn from sordid business to art.

STAGE AND SCREEN

YOUNGER FACES REVEALED AS STARS IN THE NEW WEEK'S RUN OF SHADOW PLAYS

"A MILLION BIDS" at the Metropolitan places Dolores Costello and Malcolm McGregor in what is known as an embarrassing position. Miss Dolores takes herself with two anxious husbands.

THE UNLICENSED VICTUALER is Monte Blue, appearing as a not so dumb waiter in something called "Hitler Rides" at the Modern and Beacon. The lady lacking the appetite is Myrna Loy.

AN AMERICAN TRAGEDY about to be enacted in "Rookies" at Loew's Orpheum. Karl Dane, as the horny top sergeant, is going to take it out on George K. Arthur for stealing his girl.

THE WELL WISHERS are William Collier, Jr., and Mary Astor, here and here, respectively, in "The Sunset Derby" (Olympia), a film of love on the racetrack, and horses, horses. Mr. Collier, of course, is bound to win.

AT THE BEACH it is easily possible to become washed without ever leaving the land. Coney Island candy in large quantities will do the trick, as Clara Bow and Reed Howes discover in "Rough House Rodeo" at the Scala.

'Rough Rider' Editor Has Busy Day

Well, the first week of the "Rough Riders" contest is over, and the Rough Rider Editor guesses he'll have to work tomorrow. It may be that he'll spend the day just lining open envelopes and making the letters for the final judgment for there certainly are plenty of them. There's still another week for those who haven't got into the contest, so if you haven't tried your hand at it, why not now? After you read the papers, get started on the Rough Rider letter. You'll find it worth while.

Drama Within a Drama On Moving Picture Set

A touching reunion occurred during the filming of "Women Love Diamonds," new film at Loew's State, when Clara Fitzgerald, who plays the mother in the picture, found her role as screen mother to exact that of a real mother—and welcome a daughter who had not seen her for several years.

NEW BOSTON—Laura La Plante in "Beware of Widows" (first run), adapted from the stage play. Hilarious farce comedy. The cast includes Bryant Washburn, Tully Marshall and Walter Hiers. William Seiler directed. A Universal picture. Also vaudeville.

SCOLLAY SQUARE—Clara Bow in "Rough House Rodeo." Farce comedy involving a lady from Tenth avenue with the idle rich, the prize ring and cabarets. Reed Howes plays opposite the star. Also a bill of vaudeville.

FENWAY—"The Rough Riders" (second week), epic film of the Spanish-American War with George Bancroft, Noah Berry, Charles Emmett Mack, Charles Farrell and Mary Astor. Victor Fleming directed.

CLERGY INDORSE BIBLE FILM

Representatives of ten different religious faiths gathered at the Cecil B. De Mille studios in Culver City before production started on "The King of Kings," which starts Monday at the Tremont, and gave valuable personal advice to the director. This is said to make the first time that a clergy ever open-ly endorsed motion picture before the start of camera-work.

CHANGES IN VAUDEVILLE

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Herald Byrd, the youthful Oriental wonder worker, in four of suspended animation. Jack Gottle, Joan Paley and Chuck De Haven in a tabloid revue. "The Heir" in a monologue on current topics. Kathy and Knox in a farce comedy play. Gertrude Mandy in songs. Pauline and other. The feature film is "Rookies" with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur. In a comedy musical act, Tonia, Europa, Josephine, Edmond and Grant in "The Flipper and The Jelly Bean." Tonia and Clark in a dance creation, and others. Also Doc Keweenaw and his band with the Vibron and Chord Society of fifty voices.

BOSTON, SATURDAY, JUNE 11, 1927

June Days---Diplomas and Decisive Games

HIGH-FLYING EAGLE. Lefty Shea, ace of Jack Slattery's Boston College mound corps, who is slated to hurl the second game of the B. C.-Holy Cross series at Braves Field today. B. C. won the first encounter.

STILL FAVORITES. Rusty Callow's famous L. of Washington crew, one of the strongest entries in the Poughkeepsie Regatta.

NOTHING TO IT! It's in the blood. Crusader, star colt out of Man o' War, is shown in this International Newsreel photograph all of seven lengths ahead of the field at the finish of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont. Jockey Kummer is up.

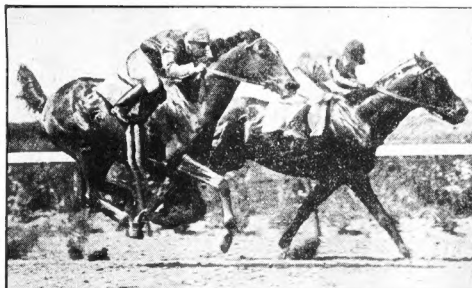

OUT FOR REVENGE. Jim Davidson of Holy Cross, who is Coach Jack Barry's choice to pitch the second game of the series with Boston College today. Jim hopes to turn the tables on his ancient rivals.

HONORS GALORE come to Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd. She is the Philadelphia District golf champion and this week was runner-up to Miss Glenna Collett in the Women's Eastern G. A. championships held at Belmont Springs Country Club.

DEFENDS TITLE. Bobby Jones, who cleaned up virtually all the important golf titles in sight last year, is now at Oakmont, where he hopes to retain his American Open crown. He will find the opposition stiff.

WHO WOULDN'T SMILE? Joe Dundee has a good reason, for he is now the welterweight boxing champion of the world.

JUST ANOTHER LAUREL. Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, who is the new Women's Eastern golf champion, just adds another jewel to an already well-studded crown.
